seminar paper from the year 2020 in the subject politics region usa university of bonn language english abstract this paper will focus on what lichtman calls the thirteen keys to the white house and how he used them to predict the outcomes of the last nine presidential elections to do so his book the keys to the white house which was firstly published in 1996 is required as the main source for the following steps that will serve as the leading topics of each chapter of this paper the first chapter will briefly summarize and explain lichtman s thirteen keys and how they were determined as critical indicators for predicting the winner of a presidential election in a second step and therefore in the second chapter the focus will lie on how lichtman decided whether a key applied to a residing president or not especially regarding certain keys which cannot be answered simply because of extraordinary circumstances surrounding particular candidates of the various presidential elections since 1984 as Lichtman stated that the presidential race between Republican candidate Donald J. Trump and Democratic candidate and former first lady of the United States Hillary Clinton was the hardest election to predict. A third chapter will focus on the reasons for that. Additionally, the chapter will try to apply the keys to a new election by assuming that Donald Trump will run for office again.

Seminar paper from the year 2014 in the subject Law, European and International Law, Intellectual Properties, Grade 4-5, University of Fribourg, Language English, Abstract.

International organizations are created by a treaty between at least two subjects of international law, mostly states. These confer rights and obligations to international organizations which they have to fulfil with their own organs. Two decisive elements materialize during the founding process of an international organization: the first one is of international nature, namely the treaty between the founding states, because they agree on the international plain. Treaties between states are always of international nature. Art. 2, i, lit. a, VCLT. The second one may be of internal or international nature or both, namely the constituent instruments of an international organization, which alternative is the right one remains unclear and thus is the subject of this paper. The latter derives from the former whereby they both form the constituent instruments of international organizations. Since the International Law Commission (ILC) published the draft articles on the responsibility of international organizations (DARIO) containing rules when an international organization is responsible for a committed international wrongful act by them, the constituent instruments of international organizations are also referred to as the rules of the organization. DARIO is the daughter of responsibility of states for internationally wrongful acts (ARSWA) with the same abandonment, namely to make international organizations responsible for international wrongful acts committed by international organizations. Given that ARSIWA only addresses states, this paper will be divided into three parts while the first and third parts are auxiliary sections to introduce the topic and present the results of this paper. The second part is the main one. Accordingly, it is divided into two subparts: namely, the notion and implications. In the first subpart, the problem of the term 'rules of the organization' will be discussed while the second subpart will highlight what could happen if the constituent instruments, another expression for the term 'rules of the organization' of international organizations are qualified as natural rules, international rules or rules that are of both natures.
